CAAM UNVEILS NEW CORPORATE LOGO

A Transformation for Safer Skies and a Stronger Future for Malaysia's Aviation Industry

PUTRAJAYA – The Civil Aviation Authority of Malaysia (CAAM) today unveiled its new corporate logo and identity, marking a major milestone in its transformation journey as Malaysia's sole aviation regulator. With its mandate now expanded to include economic regulatory oversight in addition to safety and security, CAAM is better positioned to guide the nation's aviation industry towards sustainable growth and global competitiveness.

The refreshed identity represents more than a new image as it reflects CAAM's renewed purpose to position itself as a modern, independent and globally aligned regulator that supports Malaysia's goal of becoming a leading aviation hub in the Asia-Pacific region.

As a vital driver of Malaysia's economy, contributing significantly to trade, tourism, investment and job creation, the aviation sector is poised for growth. With key national milestones such as Malaysia's ASEAN Chairmanship in 2025 and Visit Malaysia Year 2026, CAAM's transformation comes at a pivotal moment to ensure the nation's aviation industry remains safe, resilient and competitive at par with global standards.

Minister of Transport, YB Loke Siew Fook, who officiated the unveiling of the new corporate logo, said, "This new corporate identity is not just a new look for CAAM, but a new promise that Malaysian skies remain safe, our aviation sector resilient and our future in global aviation secure."

Chairman of CAAM, Dato' Mohamed Sharil Tarmizi, emphasised that the refreshed image reflects core values of professionalism, integrity and trust which highlight CAAM's responsibilities. "The new CAAM is not just about how we look, but how we carry out our roles as the regulator and in raising the bar for aviation regulation, fostering innovation and ensuring our skies remain among the safest in the world."

Echoing this, CEO of CAAM, Dato' Captain Norazman Mahmud added, "This identity represents our commitment to strengthening oversight, embracing technology and driving sustainability. Most importantly, it reflects the unity between the Ministry of Transport, our aviation stakeholders and CAAM that are all aligned with one mission which is to ensure safer skies and a stronger aviation future for Malaysia."

For the aviation industry, CAAM's identity signifies more than regulatory authority. It reflects a renewed approach where CAAM serves as a facilitator and partner for the industry players, not an obstacle to growth. Airlines, airports, maintenance providers, training organisations and other stakeholders can expect greater collaboration, clearer guidance and streamlined certification processes. CAAM's role is not to hinder or find fault, but to ensure that as the industry expands, it does so responsibly, sustainably and without compromising safety.

Through this transformation, CAAM is embracing a fresh approach that encourages the industry to engage more openly, viewing CAAM not only as strict but a regulator that is committed to assisting operators in doing things the right way, in line with international standards. A regulator's role is to assist, facilitate and safeguard to ensure that growth in aviation is not reckless, but resilient and lasting.

Passengers and consumers will also benefit from improved safety oversight and service quality, further reinforcing Malaysia's reputation as a trusted and competitive aviation hub. The transformation is closely aligned with global sustainability efforts including the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) net zero targets and the Malaysia Aviation Decarbonisation Blueprint.

Most importantly, CAAM's renewed focus also ensures resilience, equipping the industry to respond effectively to challenges ranging from rapid traffic growth and digitalisation to climate-related disruptions. The transformation also strengthens capacity building and international collaboration, ensuring Malaysia's aviation professionals are equipped with the skills needed for the industry's future. Internally, the new identity serves as a reminder to the staff of their collective responsibility to deliver regulatory excellence with professionalism, integrity and care.

With this transformation, CAAM reaffirms its mission of safeguarding Malaysia's skies while facilitating sustainable industry growth and a promise that the new corporate identity proudly embodies.
